Mine is left over from my last daughters college days, she graduated 12 years ago. It is a 1.8 cu ft Sears.

However for those of you that are not lucky enough to have kids grateful enough to leave you their college dorm refrigerator the following is offered as justification to the household finance manager.

1. Good place to store stuff for holiday feasts when kids come home on annual visit.
2. Extra space for those stupid little crustless sandwiches for bridge club
3. Back up in case other refrigerator breaks down.
4. I can store drinks in it so when my friends are visiting in the shop they won't have to track through the house, and disturb bridge club.
5. I can have a cold one when working in the shop, and will not have to track balsa shavings through the house, and upset garden club.
6. Store extra drinks when grandchildren come.
7. Place to keep center piece from women's club luncheon until it is no longer recognizable.
8. Keep all those smelly glues, accelerators, epoxy that must be stored in a cool place out of her refrigerator.
9. Place to keep limburger cheese, sardines, smoked herring, and other male staples not allowed in premises.
10. Place to store those very expensive batteries so they will last longer, as well as those needed for grandkids toys when they visit.
